[Jenkins takes] the reader on a fanciful tour. . . . Her goal is to assemble a collection that describes beauty of all kinds, interesting, affordable and, as collections of miscellany often are, eccentric. In this she succeeds, and Encyclopedia of the Exquisite is both attractive and addictive. It is certainly catnip for the trivia-besotted, but it also is a work that can easily be read in short bursts, and reread as the whim dictates.

Making alist of costly, trashy things is easy: leopard-skin rugs, yachts withbulletproof glass, Jeff Koons's paintings, Monte Carlo. But discoveringelegance in modest or everyday sources, especially in the face of amultibillion-dollar luxury industry, takes more doing. That is the subject ofJessica Kerwin Jenkins's Encyclopedia of the Exquisite, a deceptively light survey of "uncommondelicacies, carefully selected."

Batik is an Indonesian technique of wax-resist dyeing applied to whole cloth. This technique originated from island of Java, Indonesia. Batik is made either by drawing dots and lines of the resist with a spouted tool called a tjanting, or by printing the resist with a copper stamp called a cap. The applied wax resists dyes and therefore allows the artisan to colour selectively by soaking the ...
