The back-and-forth dialectic between Socrates and his interlocutors thus becomes Plato's way of arguing against the earlier, less sophisticated views or positions and for the more sophisticated ones later. "Hegel's dialectics" refers to the particular dialectical method of argument employed by the 19th Century German philosopher, G.W.F. Hegel (see entry on Hegel ), which, like other "dialectical" methods, relies on a contradictory process between opposing sides.

Hegel's Dialectics (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, perhaps the most influential of all German philosophers, made one of the last great attempts to develop philosophy as an all-embracing scientific system. This system places Hegel among the "classical" philosophers — Aristotle, Aquinas, Spinoza — who also attempted to build grand conceptual edifices.

The oldest son of a civil servant from south-west Germany, Georg Hegel was born a quarter of a millennium ago, in 1770. As a theology student in Stuttgart, Hegel feared that he would become a Populärphilosoph- a populariser of complex theories. There was little danger of that! In fact, few thinkers are as difficult to understand.
