All of my tractors are working tractors, not show tractors and several have quite a few modifications but I always try to do "bolt-on" modifications and keep and label any removed parts.

We did look at one IH steel wheeled plow but that hub was a little different from ours. Edit: Today my friend saw a subsoiler like this one sitting at a scrapper's place and stopped to take a look. The subsoiler at the scrapper had a hub broken in the same place as ours.

Bolt pattern did not fit perfectly for my JD LT155, but nothing a little modification (and a power drill) could not overcome. Love how comfy this seat is. It is a huge improvement from the stock seat. The higher back adds a great deal of comfort, and the in seat drain hole helps keep water from pooling on the seat.

My tractor is a Cat-2 tractor, so with the exception of my backhoe or scraper box, I need to use sleeves to adapt my Cat-1 implements to my Cat-2 hitch. It can be annoying when you misplace these stupid little sleeves, but having a Cat-2 hitch opens up my options when buying implements and allows me to use a larger backhoe.

Chickens are ideally suited to animal tractors, although ducks, rabbits, pigs, and guinea pigs have been used in these mobile pens.
